God requests specific artisans to make the Tabernacle's interiors. What is the relationship between art and worship?

This Week's Parashah

Moses reminds the Israelites to observe the Sabbath as a day of rest. The seventh day is a holy day on which no fires are to be lit. Moses reviews God's building instructions for the Tabernacle. He asks the people to bring gifts to use in its construction. The Israelites respond to Moses' call. The skilled artisans make the cloth covering and the goat's hair tent over the Tabernacle, as well as the curtain, and the screen for the entrance to the Tabernacle. The gold covered Ark of acacia wood and the cherubim on the Ark cover are constructed as are the table for the bread of display and the seven-branched menorah, the altars and the copper washbowl and stand. The appearance and construction of the vestments for officiating in the sanctuary are presented in great detail. Everything is brought before Moses for inspection. All work had been performed and completed as God had commanded. Moses blesses the Israelites. The tabernacle is finally set up on the first of Nisan in the second year of Israel's freedom. When the Tabernacle has been erected, God's presence fills it.

Today's Haftarah

The Haftarah from the Book of Ezekiel reviews the Passover sacrifices as the Prophet describes the restored Temple in Jerusalem. The Haftarah describes the festival of Passover envisioned for the new Temple period, stressing the purification at that time. These readings are intended to set our mood and thoughts on the coming Festival of Passover. As our preparations for Passover intensify, both the Maftir reading and the Haftarah focus on rituals connected with the festival. The Maftir and Haftarah each reflect two historical poles in Jewish History: the Maftir, describing the first Passover; the Haftarah, a vision of the Passover of the future, when Israel is restored to its homeland.
