

One who is seized with bulmos – מי שֶׁאֶחָזוּ בּוּלְמוֹס – If one is afflicted with bulmos and his eyes are dimmed from hunger, he should be fed, even on Yom Kippur, until his eyes recover. If there is no permitted food available, one should feed him forbidden food, starting with the most minor prohibitions (Shulhan Arukh, Orach Hayyim 618:9).

Severity of forbidden foods – חוקרי האיסורים: The prohibitions relating to food are hierarchical: Eating untithed produce is more severe than eating non-kosher meat. It is worse to eat non-kosher meat than after-growths from the Sabbatical Year, which are forbidden by rabbinic law. It is worse to eat untithed produce than produce grown in the Sabbatical Year, which is forbidden by Torah law. If there is a choice between eating untithed produce and teruma, one should separate the tithes from the untithed produce even on Shabbat or Festivals. If that is not possible, one should eat the untithed produce, as that is a less severe prohibition than eating teruma (Rambam Sefer Kedusha, Hilkhos Ma'akhalot Assurot 14:16).

LANGUAGE

Bulmos – בּוּלְמוֹס: From the Greek βουλιμία, boulimia, meaning unhealthy hunger.

NOTES

Lobe of liver – חֵצֵר כְּבֵד – Rav Hai Gaon explains that this is one of the small parts of the liver.

Feeding an ill person from the liver lobe – האֲכִילָה מִחֵצֵר כְּבֵד: It seems that the dispute here is whether this constitutes administering a remedy or not. The Rambam explains that eating the liver lobe is not a medicinal cure but a folk remedy, which requires the faith of the ill person. No Torah prohibition may be violated for a folk remedy.

One may place medicine – מְשִׁילִין לוֹ סֵם – This statement seems to permit any acts necessary to prepare the medicine, even if it means violating multiple Torah prohibitions (Rabbeinu Yehonatan).

There is uncertainty whether he is there, etc. – סֶפֶק הוּא – Some authorities explain that these uncertainties are not necessarily distinct but cumulative: It is unclear whether there is a person there, whether he is a Jew, and whether he is alive. Despite the fact that there are many uncertainties, one still violates Shabbat due to the possibility of saving a life (Rabbeinu Yehonatan; Min HaAnavim).

From when he can discern between good and bad – מִשְׁיַבְחִין בֵּין טוֹב לְרָע – Me'iri explains this is referring to nighttime, when one cannot test whether the ill person is able to distinguish food by sight. In that case, one checks whether he can discern different tastes.

The least severe first – הַקֵּל הַקֵּל קוֹדֵם – The question has been raised: Isn't this obvious; why does the Gemara need to mention it? A suggested explanation is that the Gemara is stating that even if the more severe prohibition would work better as medication, one does not administer it first. Rather, one begins with the less severe prohibitions, since they might also heal the ill person (Siah Yitzhak).

Where it is possible to feed him non-sacred food – הֵיכָא – Rashi explains that using non-sacred food might not be possible because there may be an insufficient amount. Other commentaries suggest additional interpretations to this Gemara (Gevurat Ari).

MISHNA In the case of one who is seized with the life-threatening illness bulmos,^{HLB} causing him unbearable hunger pangs and impaired vision, one may feed him even impure foods on Yom Kippur or any other day until his eyes recover, as the return of his sight indicates that he is recovering. In the case of one whom a mad dog bit, one may not feed him from the lobe of the dog's liver.^N This was thought to be a remedy for the bite, but the Rabbis deem it ineffective. And Rabbi Matya ben Harash permits feeding it to him, as he deems it effective.^N

And furthermore, Rabbi Matya ben Harash said: With regard to one who suffers pain in his throat, one may place medicine^N inside his mouth on Shabbat, although administering a remedy is prohibited on Shabbat. This is because there is uncertainty whether or not it is a life-threatening situation for him, as it is difficult to ascertain the severity of internal pain. And a case of uncertainty concerning a life-threatening situation overrides Shabbat.

Similarly, with regard to one upon whom a rockslide fell, and there is uncertainty whether he is there^N under the debris or whether he is not there; and there is uncertainty whether he is still alive or whether he is dead; and there is uncertainty whether the person under the debris is a gentile or whether he is a Jew, one clears the pile from atop him. One may perform any action necessary to rescue him from beneath the debris. If they found him alive after beginning to clear the debris, they continue to clear the pile until they can extricate him. And if they found him dead, they should leave him, since one may not desecrate Shabbat to preserve the dignity of the dead.

GEMARA The Sages taught: From where would they know that his eyes had recovered their sight? It is from when he can discern between good and bad food,^N since under the influence of bulmos one eats food indiscriminately. Abaye said: It is with tasting. When he can distinguish the tastes of different foods his eyesight must have also recovered. For example, at night, although it is dark, the sign that his eyesight has been restored is that he is able to detect difference in tastes (Me'iri).

S The Sages taught: In the case of one who is seized with bulmos and must be fed until his vision is restored, one feeds him the items whose prohibition is least severe first.^{HN} If he must be fed forbidden foods, he should first be fed those whose level of prohibition is least severe. For instance, if there is untithed produce and an unslaughtered animal carcass [neveila] or any other non-kosher meat, one feeds him the neveila, as the prohibition of untithed produced warrants death at the hand of Heaven, but eating non-kosher meat is a transgression punishable only by lashes. If there is untithed produce and produce from the Sabbatical Year, he is fed the produce from the Sabbatical Year. Untithed produce warrants death at the hand of Heaven, whereas the produce of a Sabbatical Year is prohibited by a positive mitzva and there is no punishment associated with it.

If they have untithed produce and teruma, there is a dispute between tanna'im as to which food they should feed him, as it was taught in a baraita: One feeds him untithed produce and does not feed him teruma. Ben Teima says: It is better to feed him teruma and not feed him untithed produce. Rabba said: Where it is possible to feed him non-sacred food^N by separating tithes from untithed produce and thereby rendering the remainder permitted, everyone agrees that one should make the produce fit for consumption by separating tithes and then feed it to him, even on Shabbat, when it is otherwise prohibited to separate tithes.

BACKGROUND

מתני' מי שֶׁאֶחָזוּ בּוּלְמוֹס – מאכילין אותו אֶפְלוּ דְבָרִים טְמֵאִים, עַד שֶׁיֵּאָרוּ עֵינָיו. מִי שֶׁנִּשְׁכַּח כְּלָב שׁוֹטֵף – אֵין מְאָכִילִין אוֹתוֹ מִחֵצֵר כְּבֵד שְׁלוֹ, וְרַבִּי מַתְיָא בֶן חֲרַשׁ מַתִּיר.

וְעוֹד אָמַר רַבִּי מַתְיָא בֶן חֲרַשׁ: הַחוּשׁ בְּגֵרוֹנוֹ מְשִׁילִין לוֹ סֵם בְּתוֹךְ פִּי בַשַּׁבָּת, מִפְּנֵי שֶׁהוּא סֶפֶק נִפְשׁוֹת, וְכָל סֶפֶק נִפְשׁוֹת דּוֹחָה אֶת הַשַּׁבָּת.

מִי שֶׁנִּפְלָה עָלָיו מְפֹלֶת, סֶפֶק הוּא שֶׁסֶפֶק אֵינוֹ שָׁם, סֶפֶק חַי סֶפֶק מֵת, סֶפֶק גּוֹי סֶפֶק יִשְׂרָאֵל – מִפְּקָחִין עָלָיו אֶת הַגָּל. מִצְאֹהוּ חַי – מִפְּקָחִין, וְאִם מֵת – יִנְחֹהוּ.

Bulmos – בּוּלְמוֹס: The unhealthy sensation of hunger is the result of a drastic drop in blood sugar level, due to food deprivation or illness. As described in the Gemara, this state is accompanied by a partial loss of vision. The Sages advised that an individual suffering from this symptom should immediately be fed sweet foods, which are digested quickly by the body.

כי פליגי – בדל לא אפשו בחולין. מר סבר: טבל חמור, ומר סבר: תרומה חמורה. מר סבר: טבל חמור, אבל תרומה – תויא לכהן. ומר סבר: תרומה חמורה, אבל טבל – אפשו לתקומיה.

Where they disagree, it is in a case where it is impossible to feed him non-sacred food because there is no way to separate tithes. One Sage holds that the prohibition of untithed produce is more severe; and one Sage holds that the prohibition of teruma is more severe. The two sides reason as follows. One Sage holds that the prohibition of untithed produce is more severe because it is prohibited to everyone; but teruma is fit for a priest, and therefore one could say that its prohibition is less severe. And one Sage holds that teruma is more severe because non-priests may never eat it, while untithed produce can be made fit to eat, and therefore, even while it is still untithed, the prohibition against eating it is less severe.

Daf 83 Amud b

NOTES

טלטול מדרבנן הוא – מובחן: Moving is prohibited by rabbinic law – טלטול מדרבנן הוא – This point has been challenged, since the Gemara elsewhere gives a different reason for the prohibition against separating tithes on Shabbat. The main objection to separating tithes on Shabbat is that such an action makes the food fit for eating. This effectively completes the food, which is akin to repairing a vessel. Such an act is a primary labor prohibited on Shabbat. The Rambam argues that tithing food is similar to enacting a business deal, since one tithes fruits in order to present them to the priest, who thereby acquires them. Other commentaries write that there is an issue of carrying an object that is set aside from use on Shabbat [muktze]. However, this is not the primary problem (Tosefet Yom HaKippurim; Pithei She'arim).

Imperforate container – עציץ שאינו נקוב: A plant grown in an imperforate container does not absorb water or nutrients from the ground. Therefore, biblical laws of terumot and tithes do not apply to such a plant. The Torah's laws in this area apply only to grains growing in the ground. However, in the case of a perforated pot, the roots of a plant it holds draw nutrients from the earth through the holes, connecting the plant to the ground. The Sages decreed that plants grown in imperforate containers are included by rabbinic law within the halakhot of teruma and tithes due to their similarity to plants grown in perforated pots.

HALAKHA

One whom a snake bit – מי שנשכו נחש: If someone is bitten by a snake, it is treated as a mortal wound even when it is uncertain whether or not the snake is deadly. Even if there are no expert doctors present and the ill person says nothing, everything that would usually be done on a weekday to heal him must be done for him on Shabbat (Shulhan Arukh, Orah Hayyim 328:6).

אפשו בחולין פשיטא! לא צריכא בשבת.

It was stated that, according to Rabba, if it is possible to make the untithed produce fit and then feed him with non-sacred food, one should do so. The Gemara is surprised at this: It is obvious that if it is possible to tithe the produce and feed him that, one should do so. Why must it be stated? The Gemara explains: No, it is necessary to state this with regard to a case on Shabbat, when it is generally prohibited to separate terumot and tithes. Even so, the Sages said that it is better to separate terumot and tithes on Shabbat rather than feed the ill person untithed produce.

The Gemara asks: With regard to Shabbat it is also obvious, since the prohibition against separating terumot and tithes is merely a prohibition against moving, which is prohibited by rabbinic law.ⁿ That is certainly less severe than the prohibition against eating untithed produce. The Gemara answers: With what are we dealing here? We are dealing with fruits grown in an imperforate container,ⁿ which are not subject to teruma by Torah law but by rabbinic law. The Gemara teaches that it is preferable to transgress the rabbinic prohibition of tithing the fruit on Shabbat rather than feed the ill person untithed produce, although in this case the prohibition is rabbinic.

§ The Gemara now discusses the aforementioned two opinions: One Sage, ben Teima, holds that untithed produce is more severe, and therefore one must tithe the fruit although it is prohibited to separate teruma on Shabbat; and one Sage, the first tanna, holds that teruma is more severe.

לימא תנאי היא, דתנאי: מי שנשכו נחש קורין לו רופא במקום המקום, ומקריעין לו את התרנגולת, וגוזזין לו את הכרישין, ומאכילין אותו ואין צריך לעשר, דברי רבי. רבי אלעזר ברבי שמעון אומר: לא יאכל עד שיעשר.

Let us say that Rabba's view is one side of a dispute between tanna'im, as it was taught in a baraita: In the case of one whom a snake bitⁿ on Shabbat and who is in danger, one calls a doctor for him to come from one place to another; and one tears a chicken apart for him if he needs its meat for healing; and one harvests leeks from the ground and feeds them to him for healing purposes, and one need not separate tithes; this is the statement of Rabbi Yehuda HaNasi. Rabbi Elazar, son of Rabbi Shimon, says: He should not eat it unless it has been tithed.

Let us say that Rabba's statement that one must separate teruma and tithes from the fruit for the ill person on Shabbat, even from untithed produce prohibited by rabbinic law, corresponds to the view of Rabbi Elazar, son of Rabbi Shimon. He says that one must tithe the leeks for the ill person even on Shabbat, although leeks, like all other vegetables, are considered untithed produce only by rabbinic law. And Rabba's opinion does not follow the view of Rabbi Yehuda HaNasi.

He was not seized with bulmos – לֹא בּוּלְמוֹס אֶחְזִיָּהּ – In this story, Saul had imposed a ban on eating. The people saved Jonathan from being killed by his father for violating this ban only because Jonathan performed a great service for the nation. If bulmos had seized him, eating honey to save his life would have superseded this ban (Toledot Yitzhak).

BACKGROUND

East side of a fig tree – מְזֻרְחָה שֶׁל תְּאֵנָה – As opposed to other fruit, figs do not ripen all at once. Instead, they ripen gradually; each day fruit on a different part of the tree might ripen. Since sunlight and warmth hasten the ripening of the fruit, it is common to see more ripe fruit on the eastern side of the tree than on other areas of the tree.

LANGUAGE

Jugs [lagei] – לָגִי: This is the plural form of lagina, from the Latin lagena or the Greek λάγυνος, lagynos, which is a jug made of clay.

Lagynos from the early Roman period

אֶפִּילוּ תִימָא רַבִּי, עַד כָּאֵן לֹא קָאָמַר רַבִּי הָתָם – אֵלָּא לְעִנְיָן מֵעֶשֶׂר יֶרֶק דְּרַבָּנָן. אֲבָל בְּמַעֲשֵׂר דְּגֵן דְּטַבֵּל דְּאוּרִייתָא הוּא – אֶפִּילוּ רַבִּי מוֹדֵה דְּאֵי שְׂרִית לִיה בְּעֵצִיץ שְׂאִינֵי נְקוּב אֲתֵי לְמִיבֵל בְּעֵצִיץ שְׂהוּא נְקוּב.

The Gemara rejects this: Even if you say that Rabba holds in accordance with the view of Rabbi Yehuda HaNasi, Rabbi Yehuda HaNasi is saying that one should not separate tithes only there, with regard to the requirement to take the tithe from vegetables, like leeks, which is rabbinic in origin. This requirement was decreed lest one come to confuse vegetables with produce that is untithed by Torah law. However, with regard to the tithe of grains, which has the status of untithed produce by Torah law, although in this particular circumstance their untithed status is rabbinic because the grains grew in an imperforate container, even Rabbi Yehuda HaNasi concedes that the produce must be tithed. Because if it is permitted for him to eat without separating tithes from produce grown in an imperforate container, he may err and come to eat from grain grown in a perforated pot, which is considered untithed produce by Torah law. Consequently, one must separate tithes on Shabbat before feeding an ill person, even according to the opinion of Rabbi Yehuda HaNasi.

תָּגוּ רַבָּנָן: מִי שְׂאֶחְזוּ בּוּלְמוֹס מֵאֲכִילִין אוֹתוֹ דְּבִשׁ וְכָל מִינֵי מִתְקָה, שְׂהַדְּבִשׁ וְכָל מִינֵי מִתְקָה מֵאִירִין מֵאוּר עֵינֵי שֶׁל אָדָם. וְאִף עַל פִּי שְׂאִין רְאִיָּה לְדַבֵּר, וְכִי לְדַבֵּר – רְאִי נָא כִּי אוֹרוֹ עֵינֵי כִּי טַעַמְתִּי מֵעֵט דְּבִשׁ הוּא.

The Sages taught in a baraita: In the case of one who is seized with bulmos, one feeds him honey and all types of sweet foods, as the honey and all types of sweet foods restore the sight of his eyes. And although there is no clear proof for the matter, there is an allusion to the matter. Jonathan said: “See, I pray you, how my eyes are brightened because I tasted a little of this honey” (1 Samuel 14:29).

The Gemara asks: And why does the baraita say: Although there is no clear proof for the matter, when that verse is a strong proof? The Gemara answers: There, Jonathan was not seized with bulmos,^N he was merely very hungry. Therefore, the episode provides no evidence that honey or sweet foods are the remedy for bulmos.

אָמַר אֲבִי: לֹא שֵׁנוּ אֵלָּא לְאַחַר אֲכִילָהּ. אֲבָל קוֹדֵם אֲכִילָהּ – מִגֵּרָר גְּרִיר, דְּכַתְּבִי: “וּמִצֵּאֹו אִישׁ מִצְרִי בְּשָׂדֵה וַיִּקְחוּ אוֹתוֹ אֶל דּוֹד וַיִּתְּנוּ לוֹ לֶחֶם וַיֹּאכַל וַיִּשְׁקוּהוּ מִיַּם וַיִּתְּנוּ לוֹ פֶּלֶחַ דְּבִילָהּ וּשְׁנֵי צְמוּקִים וַיֹּאכַל וַתִּשָּׁב רִחוֹו אֵלָיו כִּי לֹא אָכַל לֶחֶם וְלֹא שָׁתָה מִיַּם שְׁלִשָּׁה יָמִים וּשְׁלִשָּׁה לַיְלוֹת.”

Abaye said: They taught that honey restores a one’s eyesight only after eating other food, but before eating other food it whets one’s appetite, as it is written: “And they found an Egyptian man in the field, and brought him to David, and they gave him bread and he ate, and they gave him water to drink; and they gave him a piece of a cake of figs, and two clusters of raisins, and he ate, and his spirit was restored; for he had eaten no bread nor drunk any water for three days and three nights” (1 Samuel 30:11–12). This indicates that sweets are given after the main course and not before it.

אָמַר רַב נַחֲמָן אָמַר שְׁמוּאֵל: מִי שְׂאֶחְזוּ בּוּלְמוֹס מֵאֲכִילִין אוֹתוֹ אֵלָּהּ בְּדִבְשׁ. רַב הוּנָא בְּרִיה דְּרַב יְהוֹשֻׁעַ אָמַר: אִף סוּלַת נְקִיָּה בְּדִבְשׁ. רַב פַּפָּא אָמַר: אֶפִּילוּ קִמְחֵי דְּשַׁעֲרֵי בְּדִבְשָׁא. אָמַר רַבִּי יוֹחָנָן: פְּעַם אַחַת אֶחְזִי בּוּלְמוֹס, וְרָצִיתִי לְמִזְרְחָה שֶׁל תְּאֵנָה, וְקִיַּמְתִּי בְּעֵצִיץ: “הִתְקַבְּמָה תְּחִינָה בְּעֵלְיָהּ.” דְּתָנִי רַב יוֹסֵף: הָרוּעָה לְטַעוֹם טַעַם תְּאֵנָה – יִפְנֶה לְמִזְרְחָה, שְׁנָאֵמַר: “וּמִמְגֵד תְּבוֹאוֹת שְׁמֶשׁ.”

Rav Nahman said that Shmuel said: In the case of one who is seized with bulmos, one feeds him a sheep’s tail with honey, since the combination of the fatty meat and the honey helps greatly. Rav Huna, son of Rav Yehoshua, said: Also, fine wheat flour with honey is a remedy. Rav Pappa said: Even barley flour with honey is good for curing bulmos. Rabbi Yohanan said: Once I was seized with bulmos and I ran to the east side of a fig tree^B and found ripe figs there, which I ate. Figs on a tree do not all ripen at once but ripen first on the side where the sun rises, so Rabbi Yohanan searched first for figs on the east side of the tree. And I thereby fulfilled the verse: “Wisdom preserves the lives of those who have it” (Ecclesiastes 7:12). As Rav Yosef taught: One who wishes to taste the flavor of the fig should turn to the east, as it is stated: “And for the precious things of the sun’s fruits” (Deuteronomy 33:14), implying that the sun ripens fruit and makes them sweet.

רַבִּי יְהוּדָה וְרַבִּי יוֹסֵי הוּוּ קָא אֲוִלֵי בְּאוּרְחָא. אֶחְזִיָּהּ בּוּלְמוֹס לְרַבִּי יְהוּדָה – קִפְחִיָּה לְרוּעָה, אֲכִילָהּ לְרִיפְתָא. אָמַר לִיה רַבִּי יוֹסֵי: קִפְחָת אֶת הָרוּעָה! כִּי מָטוּ לְמִתָּא אֶחְזִיָּהּ בּוּלְמוֹס לְרַבִּי יוֹסֵי, אֶהְדְּרוּהוּ בְּלָגִי וְצֵעִי. אָמַר לִיה רַבִּי יְהוּדָה: אֲנִי קִפְחָתִי אֶת הָרוּעָה וְאַתָּה קִפְחָת אֶת הָעִיר כּוּלָּהּ.

The Gemara relates that Rabbi Yehuda and Rabbi Yosef were walking on the road when Rabbi Yehuda was seized with bulmos. He overpowered a nearby shepherd and ate the bread that the shepherd had in his hand, since his life was in danger. Rabbi Yosef said to him: You have robbed that shepherd. When they reached the city, Rabbi Yosef was seized with bulmos, and all the people of the city surrounded him with jugs [lagei]^L and plates with all sorts of sweets. Rabbi Yehuda said to him in jest: I robbed only the shepherd, but you have robbed the entire city.

And furthermore, it is told: Rabbi Meir and Rabbi Yehuda and Rabbi Yosei were walking on the road together. Rabbi Meir would analyze names and discern one's nature from his name,ⁿ while Rabbi Yehuda and Rabbi Yosei were not apt to analyze names. When they came to a certain place, they looked for lodging and were given it. They said to the innkeeper: What is your name? He said to them: My name is Kidor. Rabbi Meir said to himself: Perhaps one can learn from this that he is a wicked person, as it is stated: "For they are a generation [ki dor] of upheavals" (Deuteronomy 32:20). Since it was Friday afternoon, Rabbi Yehuda and Rabbi Yosei entrusted their purses to him. Rabbi Meir did not entrust his purse to him but went and placed it at the grave of the innkeeper's father.

The innkeeper's father appeared to the innkeeper in a dream and said to him: Go take the purse placed at the head of that man, i.e., the innkeeper's father. The following day, he said to the Sages: This is what appeared to me in my dream. They said to him: Dreams during twilight on Shabbat evening have no substance and should not be trusted. Even so, Rabbi Meir went and guarded his money all that day and then took it.

The next day, the rabbi said to the innkeeper: Give us our purses. He said to them: These matters never occurred; you never gave me any purses. Rabbi Meir said to them: Why didn't you analyze his name to learn that he is a wicked man? They said to him: Why didn't the Master tell us? He said to them: I said one should be suspicious, but have I said a person should be established as wicked? Could I say to you with certainty that he is wicked based on his name alone?

What did they do? They dragged the innkeeper and brought him to a store and gave him wine to drink. After he drank the wine, they saw lentils on his mustache, showing that he had eaten lentils that day. They went and gave this sign to his wife. They said that the innkeeper had ordered that their money be returned to them upon the sign that he ate lentils at his last meal. And they took their purses and went. He went and killed his wife out of anger that she did this.

This is as we learned in a baraita: Due to a person's laxity in the first washing,ⁿ they fed him pork. There was an innkeeper who was accustomed to feed pork to gentiles and kosher meat to Jews. He distinguished between Jews and gentiles by watching to see whether they performed the ritual hand-washing before eating. One time, a Jew came and ate without washing his hands before the meal, and the innkeeper gave him pork to eat. Laxity in the final washing, the washing of one's hands and mouth after a meal, caused the innkeeper to kill the person. This is similar to that story, as had the wicked innkeeper washed his mouth, the rabbi would not have known that he had eaten lentils.

And in the end, they too, Rabbi Yehuda and Rabbi Yosei, would analyze names. When they came to a house of a landlord named Bala, they did not enter. They said: Conclude from here that he is certainly wicked, as it is written: "I said of her who was worn out [bala] by adulteries" (Ezekiel 23:43), as it states: "After I am grown old [beloti] shall I have pleasure?" (Genesis 18:12). "Worn out by adulteries" means aged through adulteries.

A name determines character – שְׂמָא גָרִים – This does not mean that everyone with an ugly name is evil, since there are certainly exceptions to the rule. Nevertheless, there is reason to be concerned with respect to names, particularly when one is on a journey and does not know the people he encounters. The Sages have said that although parents have their own reasons for giving a baby a specific name, they are unknowingly directed toward a true and appropriate name for their child (Tosefet Yom HaKippurim; Maharsha).

First washing – מִים ראשונים – The main point here is explained in tractate Hullin, where the story is recounted at length. It seems that this episode took place during a time of religious persecution, when the Jews could not express their desire for kosher meat. Therefore, the innkeeper relied on signs.

מי שֶׁנִּשְׁכַּח כְּלָב שׁוֹטֵה וְכוּ'. תָּנוּ רַבֵּנּוּ: חֲמִשָּׁה דְּבָרִים נֶאֱמָרוּ בְּכָלֵב שׁוֹטֵה: פִּי פְתוּחַ וְרִירוֹ נוֹטֵף, וְאָזְנוֹ סְרוּחוֹת, וְזָנָבוֹ מוֹנֵחַ עַל יְרֵכֹתָיו וּמְהַלֵּךְ בְּצִידֵי דְרָכִים וְיֵשׁ אוֹמְרִים אִף נֹבַח וְאִין קוֹלוֹ נִשְׁמָע, מִמָּאי הָוִי? רַב אָמַר: נְשִׂים בְּשִׁפְמִית מְשַׁחֲקוֹת בּוֹ, וְשִׁמוּאֵל אָמַר: רוּחַ רָעָה שׁוֹרָה עָלָיו.

It was taught that in the case of one whom a mad dog^b bit, one does not feed him the lobe of its liver. The Gemara clarifies the concept of the mad dog. The Sages taught in a baraita: Five signs were said about a mad dog: Its mouth is always open; and its saliva drips; and its ears are floppy and do not stand up; and its tail rests on its legs; and it walks on the edges of roads. And some say it also barks and its voice is not heard. The Gemara asks: From where did the dog become mad? Rav said: Witches play with it and practice their magic on it, causing it to become mad. And Shmuel said: An evil spirit rests upon it.

The Gemara asks: What is the practical difference between these two opinions? The Gemara answers: There is a practical difference between them with regard to killling it with an object that is thrown from a distance like an arrow rather than with one's hands. If the dog is possessed by an evil spirit, one should avoid direct contact with it.

The Gemara comments: This was taught in a baraita in accordance with the opinion of Shmuel: When one kills a mad dog, he should kill it only with a thrown object. Furthermore, one who is rubbed by mad dog will become dangerously ill, while one bitten by the dog will die. The Gemara asks: What is the remedy for one who is rubbed by mad dog and becomes dangerously ill? The Gemara answers: Let him take off his clothing and run. The Gemara relates: Rav Huna, son of Rav Yehoshua, was rubbed by one of these mad dogs in the market, whereupon he took off his clothing and ran. He said: I have fulfilled the verse: "Wisdom preserves the lives of those who have it" (Ecclesiastes 7:12).

The Gemara continues to discuss the baraita: One bitten by a mad dog will die.^b The Gemara asks: What is the remedy? Abaye said: Let him bring the skin of a male hyena and write on it: I, so-and-so, son of so-and-so, am writing this spell about you upon the skin of a male hyena: Kanti kanti kelirus.¹ And some say he should write: *Kandi kandi keloros.*¹ And some say he should write: Kandi kandi keloros. He then writes names of God, Yah, Yah, Lord of Hosts, amen amen Selah. And let him take off his clothes and bury them in a cemetery for twelve months of the year, after which he should take them out, and burn them in an oven, and scatter the ashes at a crossroads. And during those twelve months of the year, when his clothes are buried, when he drinks water, let him drink only from a copper tubeⁿ and not from a spring, lest he see the image of the demon in the water and be endangered, like the case of Abba bar Marta, who is also called Abba bar Manyumi, whose mother made him a gold tube for this purpose.

Rabies in humans – כְּלָבִית בְּאָדָם: Untreated rabies in humans is fatal in the vast majority of cases. One of the symptoms of the disease is a painful constricting of the throat muscles when the ill person tries to swallow anything. Apparently, due to the associative connection with drinking, the mere sight of water causes this physical response. This is why the ancients referred to this disease as hydrophobia, meaning fear of water.

BACKGROUND

Mad dog – כְּלָב שׁוֹטֵה: A mad dog may reach a state of partial paralysis, which is why it displays the symptoms mentioned by the Sages: Its tail is tucked between its legs, its tongue hangs out of its mouth, and it drools. This partial paralysis also affects the dog's vocal cords, which leads to a drastic change in the sound of its barking to the point where it can no longer bark audibly.

LANGUAGE

Kelirus – קְלִירוֹס: Possibly from the Greek κληρος, klēros, meaning destiny or lottery.

NOTES

Copper tube – בְּגוֹבְתָא דְנַחְשָׂא: One approach suggests that since one of the effects of this sickness is that the ill person cannot abide the sight of water, he must drink it through a tube so he will not see what he is drinking (Arukh).

LANGUAGE

Tzefidna – צִפְדִּינָא: Some authorities maintain that the origin of this word is the Greek σήπιδων, sepidon, meaning rot. Others suggest its origin is in the Semitic root tzfd, meaning shrinkage.

Matron [matronita] – מַטְרוֹנִיתָא: From the Latin matrona, meaning woman, with the Aramaic feminine suffix -ita.

BACKGROUND

Tzefidna – צִפְדִּינָא: From the descriptions in the Talmud, it seems that this is referring to the disease scurvy, which is caused by vitamin C deficiency. The symptoms of the disease include teeth loosening and falling out, internal bleeding, and anemia. The treatments described in the Talmud are various attempts to fill this vitamin C deficiency in a concentrated form.

NOTES

What shall I do on Shabbat – בְּשַׁבַּת מַאי: Rabbi Yoḥanan was apparently busy on Shabbat with his lectures and lessons and could not visit the woman. He therefore asked what he should do on Shabbat (Siah Yitzhak).

A vow to a gentile – שְׁבוּעָה לְגוֹי: A vow to a gentile such as the matron in this episode is as valid as any other vow, and it is prohibited to break it. However, a vow made under duress is not binding. It was that clause which Rabbi Yoḥanan took advantage of in tricking the healer. Furthermore, the Gemara explains that he did not truly break his vow because he never really vowed to keep silent about the remedy in the first place. Consequently, he did not desecrate God's name, which would have been the case had he broken his vow. This is especially true because he was an important person (see Me'iri).

The mishna said: And furthermore, Rabbi Matya ben Harash said: With regard to one who suffers pain in his throat, one may place medicine inside his mouth on Shabbat, although administering a remedy is prohibited on Shabbat. The Gemara discusses a related incident: Rabbi Yoḥanan suffered from the illness tzefidna,¹⁸ which first affects the teeth and gums and then the intestines. He went to a certain gentile matron [matronita]¹⁹ who was a well-known healer. She prepared a medicine for him on Thursday and Friday. He said to her: What shall I do on Shabbat,²⁰ when I cannot come to collect the medicine from you? She said to him: You will not need it. He asked her: If I do need it, what shall I do? She said to him: Swear to me that you will not reveal the remedy; then I will tell you, and you can prepare it yourself should you need it. He swore: To the God of the Jews, I will not reveal it. She told him the remedy. Rabbi Yoḥanan then went out and taught it publicly, revealing the secret of the remedy.

The Gemara is surprised at this: But he swore to her that he would not reveal it. The Gemara answers that in his vow he declared: I will not reveal it to the God of the Jews. However, his words imply: I will reveal it to His people, the Jews. The Gemara asks: Still, there is a desecration of God's name, as the matron now thinks that a great man of Rabbi Yoḥanan's stature broke his vow.²¹ The Gemara answers: He revealed it to her at the outset. As soon as she revealed the remedy to him, he told her that his vow would not prevent him from publicizing the remedy.

The Gemara asks: What was the medicine that she prepared for him? Rav Aḥa, son of Rav Ami, said: It was water in which leaven was steeped, olive oil, and salt. Rav Yeimar said: It was leaven itself, olive oil, and salt. Rav Ashi said: The remedy was fat from the bone marrow of a goose's wing. Abaye said: I made all of these medicines and was not cured from this ailment, until a certain Arab told me the remedy for it: Take olive seeds that are less than one-third ripe, and burn them in a fire on top of a new hoe, and stick them along the row of gums. I did this and was cured.

The Gemara asks: From where does this disease tzefidna come? It is from eating wheat bread that is too hot and fish remains fried in oil. What is the sign of this sickness? When one puts something between his teeth, blood comes out from his gums. When Rabbi Yoḥanan suffered from tzefidna, he prepared this medicine described above on Shabbat and was cured. The Gemara asks: And how did Rabbi Yoḥanan prepare this medicine on Shabbat for an ailment which affects only the gums but is not life-threatening? Rav Nahman bar Yitzhak said: Tzefidna is different, since it does indeed begin in the mouth and appears to be an illness of the teeth, but it ends up in the intestines and is dangerous.²²

Rav Ḥiyya bar Abba said to Rabbi Yoḥanan: In accordance with whose opinion did he do this? Was it not in accordance with the opinion of Rabbi Matya ben Harash, who said: In the case of one who suffers pain in his mouth, one puts medicine in his mouth on Shabbat, which is a minority opinion? Rabbi Yoḥanan said to him: It is so, but I say the Sages agreed with him about taking medicine in this case alone, but no other. If so, with regard to medicine on Shabbat, the view of Rabbi Matya ben Harash is not a minority opinion.

HALAKHA

An illness that may be healed on Shabbat – מַחֲלָה שְׂאֵפְשֵׁר – Shabbat, including any injury, wound, or abscess of the teeth, but not merely a toothache (Shulhan Arukh, Oraḥ Hayyim 328:3). לְרַפָּא בְּשַׁבַּת: Any potentially fatal injury may be healed on Yerakon – יִרְקוֹן: Yerakon seems to refer to hepatitis. The Rabbis maintained that the suggestion of Rabbi Matya ben Ḥarash was only an untested, auspicious practice, not a true remedy. Consequently, they did not allow it on Shabbat.

One feeds him the lobe of its liver – מַאֲכִילִין אוֹתוֹ מִחֶזֶק: Some commentaries see this as akin to the modern healing method of using serums of animals that were injected with rabies.

Bloodletting – מְקִיזִין דָּם: Bloodletting was a standard medical practice throughout the ancient world. The letting of small quantities of blood was considered an effective way to cure illness.

Bloodletting depicted on an ancient Greek urn

LANGUAGE

Serunkhi – סְרוּנְכִי: This apparently refers to diphtheria, as it seems to be derived from an Aramaic word meaning strangling. In cases of diphtheria, the saliva that fills the ill person's throat can lead to suffocation.

לִימָא מְסִייע לִיה: מִי שְׁאֲחִזוּ יִרְקוֹן – מַאֲכִילִין אוֹתוֹ בְּשֵׁר חֲמוֹר, מִי שְׁנִשְׁכּוּ בְּלֵב שׁוֹטֵה – מַאֲכִילִין אוֹתוֹ מִחֶזֶק כְּבִד שְׁלוֹ, וְהַחֹשֶׁשׁ בְּפִי – מְטִילִין לוֹ סֵם בְּשַׁבַּת, דְּבָרֵי רַבִּי מַתְיָא בֶן חֲרָשׁ. וְחֻכְמֵי אֹמְרִים: בְּאִילוֹ אֵין בְּהֵם מְשׁוּם רְפוּאָה. בְּאִילוֹ לְמַעוֹטֵי מַאי – מַאי לָאוּ לְמַעוֹטֵי סֵם?

לָאוּ לְמַעוֹטֵי מְקִיזִין דָּם לְסְרוּנְכִי. הֲכִי נִמְי מְסַתְבְּרָא, דְּתַנָּא: שְׁלֵשָׁה דְּבָרִים אָמַר רַבִּי יִשְׁמַעֵאל בְּרַבִּי יוֹסִי שְׁשֻׁמַּע מְשׁוּם רַבִּי מַתְיָא בֶן חֲרָשׁ: מְקִיזִין דָּם לְסְרוּנְכִי בְּשַׁבַּת, וְמִי שְׁנִשְׁכּוּ בְּלֵב שׁוֹטֵה מַאֲכִילִין אוֹתוֹ מִחֶזֶק כְּבִד שְׁלוֹ, וְהַחֹשֶׁשׁ בְּפִי מְטִילִין לוֹ סֵם בְּשַׁבַּת.

וְחֻכְמֵי אֹמְרִים: בְּאִילוֹ אֵין בְּהֵן מְשׁוּם רְפוּאָה. בְּאִילוֹ לְמַעוֹטֵי מַאי – מַאי לָאוּ אֲתַרְתִּי בְּתַרְוִיתָא, וְלְמַעוֹטֵי דְרִישָׁא? לָאוּ אֲתַרְתִּי דְרִישָׁא קַמִּיתָא, וְלְמַעוֹטֵי דְסִיפָא.

Let us say that this baraita supports him: With regard to one who is seized with yerakon,^b one feeds him donkey meat as medicine; with regard to one whom a mad dog bit, one feeds him the lobe of its liver;^b in the case of one who has pain in his mouth, one puts medicine in his mouth on Shabbat; this is the statement of Rabbi Matya ben Ḥarash. And the Rabbis say: These have no value as a remedy. The Rabbis used the term these, to exclude what? What, is it not to exclude this medicine for tzefidna, which the Rabbis agree is permitted on Shabbat?

The Gemara rejects this: No, it excludes a different remedy, which Rabbi Matya suggests: Bloodletting^b to heal the ailment *serunkhi*ⁱ is permitted on Shabbat. The Gemara comments: So too, this is reasonable to say, as it was taught in a baraita: Rabbi Yishmael, son of Rabbi Yosei, said three things that he heard in the name of Rabbi Matya ben Ḥarash: One may let blood for serunkhi on Shabbat; and in the case of one whom a mad dog bit, one feeds him the lobe of its liver; and in the case of one who has pain in his mouth, one puts medicine in his mouth on Shabbat.

And the Rabbis say: These have no value as a remedy. The Rabbis used the term these to exclude what? What, is it not to limit their argument only to the latter two items, which do not cure anything, and to exclude the first item, bloodletting for serunkhi, which everyone agrees is an effective remedy? The Gemara rejects this: No, there is no proof from here, since it is possible to say that it is referring to the first two items of the first baraita and excludes the latter clause with regard to medicine on Shabbat, which they agree with.

Come and hear a proof for the matter, as Rabba bar Shmuel taught in the following baraita: With regard to a pregnant woman who smells and craves food, one feeds her until she is satisfied, even on Yom Kippur; and in the case of one whom a mad dog bit, one feeds him from the lobe of its liver; and in the case of one who has pain in his mouth, one places medicine in his mouth on Shabbat; this is the statement of Rabbi Elazar, son of Rabbi Yosei, who said it in the name of Rabbi Matya ben Ḥarash. And the Rabbis say: In this case and no other. The Gemara clarifies: To which case is this one referring? If we say they said this about a pregnant woman, it is obvious; is there anyone who says one should not give a pregnant woman food? Rather, is it not referring to the halakha pertaining to medicine on Shabbat, which they agree is permitted? Learn from this that the Rabbis did not disagree about this.

Rav Ashi said: The wording of the mishna is also precise in accordance with this approach, as it was taught in the mishna: And furthermore, Rabbi Matya ben Ḥarash said: In the case of one who suffers pain in his mouth, one places medicine in his mouth on Shabbat, and the Rabbis do not disagree with him and say otherwise. And if it is so that the Rabbis disagree with him, then let the mishna combine the two halakhot and teach them together, and let the Rabbis disagree with both points in the latter clause. Since the mishna was not written this way, but instead the dispute of the Rabbis appears after Rabbi Matya's statement about the mad dog, learn from here that the Rabbis did not disagree with him about the halakha with regard to medicine.

Let us wait and perform this labor for him after Shabbat, perhaps he will get well – נמתין לו שְׂמָא יבְרִיא: The commentaries have explained this according to Rashi: One does not delay treatment, even if it seems that the ill person's condition is improving, unless he is certainly healthy. If any uncertainty remains, one does not wait for the matter to become clear.

These acts should not be performed by gentiles – אֵין עוֹשִׂין דְּבָרִים הַלְלוּ לֹא עַל יְדֵי גוֹיִם: Commentaries have given various reasons for this. The main reason is that it should be done immediately by those present, before the ill person's condition deteriorates, rather than waiting for a gentile to arrive. Authorities debate whether gentiles should perform the treatment if they are already present (Tosefot Rid; Me'iri).

The greatest of [gedolei] the Jewish people – גְּדוּלֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל: Alternative versions of the text suggest that this is referring to adults [gedolim] rather than scholars. Another approach argues that it is a mitzva for the greatest scholars to act because they are meticulous in observance of Shabbat and in saving lives (Rambam).

Based on the advice of women – עַל פִּי נָשִׁים: One explanation suggests that women might err in the future and compare one situation to another to reach a halakhic conclusion, leading to desecration of Shabbat in situations that are not emergencies. Another explanation is that there may be a concern that once a woman has received a stringent ruling in this matter, in the future she may not act correctly and a life will be put at risk (Me'iri; Rosh). Alternatively, perhaps there is concern that they will become lax in their general Shabbat observance.

Although he catches fish – דְּקָא צִייד כְּוֵירי: Some commentaries write that he is not liable even if he intends to catch fish during his rescue. Since he is occupied with saving a life, he is not held accountable for any prohibited labors that he performs (see Me'iri).

§ The mishna states that one with pain in his throat should be given medicine on Shabbat because it is a case of uncertainty concerning a life-threatening situation. The Gemara asks: Why do I need to say furthermore: And any case of uncertainty concerning a life-threatening situation overrides Shabbat? Rav Yehuda said that Rav said: They stated this not only in a case where there is uncertainty with regard to this Shabbat,^H but even if the uncertainty is with regard to a different future Shabbat.

What are the circumstances in which uncertainty would arise as to whether or not his life will be in danger in the future? They are a case where doctors assess that an ill person needs a certain treatment for eight days, and the first day of his illness is Shabbat. Lest you say: He should wait until evening and begin his treatment after Shabbat so they will not need to desecrate two Shabbatot for his sake, therefore it teaches us that one must immediately desecrate Shabbat for his sake. This is the halakha, despite the fact that an additional Shabbat will be desecrated as a result, because there is uncertainty about whether his life is in danger.

That was also taught in a baraita: One heats water for an ill person on Shabbat, whether to give him to drink or to wash him, since it might help him recover. And they did not say it is permitted to desecrate only the current Shabbat for him, but even a different, future Shabbat. And one must not say: Let us wait and perform this labor for him after Shabbat, perhaps he will get well^N in the meantime. Rather, one heats it for him immediately because any case of uncertainty concerning a life-threatening situation overrides Shabbat. And this is so not only with regard to uncertainty whether his life is in danger on the current Shabbat, but even in a case of uncertainty with regard to danger on a different Shabbat.

And these acts should not be performed by gentiles^{NH} or Samaritans but should be done by the greatest of the Jewish people,^N i.e., their scholars, who know how to act properly. And one does not say: These actions may be performed based on the advice of women^N or Samaritans, since they are not considered experts able to declare a person ill enough to override Shabbat. However, the opinions of these people do combine with an additional opinion, meaning that if there is a dispute, their opinions may be considered when coming to a decision.

§ The Sages taught in a baraita: One engages in saving a life on Shabbat,^H and one who is vigilant to do so is praiseworthy. And one need not take permission from a court but hurries to act on his own. How so? If one sees a child who fell into the sea, he spreads a fisherman's net and raises him from the water. And one who is vigilant and acts quickly is praiseworthy, and one need not seek permission from a court, although in doing so he catches fish^N in the net as well. Similarly, if one sees a child fall into a pit and the child cannot get out, he digs part of the ground out around the edge of the pit to create a makeshift step and raises him out. And one who is vigilant and acts quickly is praiseworthy, and one need not seek permission from a court, although in doing so he fashions a step.

HALAKHA

Not only uncertainty with regard to this Shabbat – לֹא סֵפֶק: In a situation where one may desecrate Shabbat to save a life, more than one Shabbat may be desecrated. One does not delay medical treatment to avoid desecrating Shabbat twice (Shulhan Arukh, Orach Hayyim 328:1).

These acts should not be performed by gentiles, etc. – אֵין עוֹשִׂין דְּבָרִים הַלְלוּ לֹא עַל יְדֵי גוֹיִם וכו': When Shabbat must be desecrated for the sake of an ill person who is in danger, one should attempt to ensure that this is not done by gentiles, minors, or women, but by educated adult Jews. The Rema cites an opinion that one should try to perform the action in an unusual way in order to avoid violating a prohibition by Torah law. Similarly, if the act can be performed by a gentile with no prohibition violated at all, the gentile should be employed (Or Zarua; Tosafot; Ran). In the Taz and the Arukh HaShulhan it is written that one should not act in accordance with the opinion of the Rema, and in all situations the actions should preferably be performed by Jews on Shabbat (Shulhan Arukh, Orach Hayyim 328:12).

Saving a life on Shabbat – פְּקוּחַ נִפְשׁ בְּשַׁבָּת: If a child falls into a pit, one should dig around its edge to bring the child up, even if in so doing a step is built, which is a prohibited labor on Shabbat. Similarly, one may break down a locked door to release a child, although in doing so he prepares the wood for further use. If a fire breaks out and there is potential danger to human life, the fire should be extinguished, even if a path is cleared at the same time. One need not ask the permission of the court during moments of danger but should hurry and act (Shulhan Arukh, Orach Hayyim 328:13).

דָּאָה שְׁנַנְעֵלָה דְּלֵת בְּפָנֵי תִינוּק – שׁוֹבְרָה וּמוֹצִיאָו, וְהִזְרִיז הָרִי זֶה מְשׁוֹבֵחַ וְאִין צָרִיךְ לִישׁוֹל רְשׁוֹת מְבִית דִּין – וְאָף עַל גַּב דְּקָא מִיְכוּוִן לְמִיתֵב בְּשִׁפְי. מְכַבִּין וּמְפָסְקִין מִפְּנֵי הַדְּלִיקָה בְּשַׁבָּת וְהִזְרִיז הָרִי זֶה מְשׁוֹבֵחַ וְאִין צָרִיךְ לִישׁוֹל רְשׁוֹת מְבִית דִּין – וְאָף עַל גַּב דְּקָא מְמַבֵּיךְ מְכֻבֵּי.

וְצָרִיכָא, דְּאִי אֲשִׁמוּעִינן – מְשׁוּם דְּאִדְהֵבִי וְהָיָה אֲזוּל לִי, אֲבָל בּוֹר דְּקָא תִּתֵּיב – אִימָא לָא, צָרִיכָא.

וְאִי אֲשִׁמוּעִינן בּוֹר – מְשׁוּם דְּקָא מִיְבֵעִית, אֲבָל נִנְעֵלָה דְּלֵת – אֲפֻשְׁר דִּיתֵיב בְּהָא גִיסָא וּמְשַׁבֵּישׁ לִיה בְּאִמְגוּזֵי, צָרִיכָא.

“מְכַבִּין וּמְפָסְקִין”. לָמָּה לִּי דְאֲפִילוּ לְחַצֵּר אַחֲרָת.

אָמַר רַב יוֹסֵף אָמַר רַב יְהוּדָה אָמַר שְׁמוּאֵל: לֹא הֵלְכוּ בְּפִקּוּחַ נַפְשׁ אַחֵר הָרוֹב. הֵיכִי דְמִי? אִי גִימָא דְאִיבָא תַשְׁעָה יִשְׂרָאֵל וְגוֹי אֶחָד בִּינְיָהוּ – רוֹבָא יִשְׂרָאֵל בִּינְיָהוּ! (אֵלָא) פְּלַגָּא וּפְלַגָּא – סְפֵק נַפְשׁוֹת לְהַקֵּל.

אֵלָא דְאִיבָא תַשְׁעָה גּוֹיִם וְיִשְׂרָאֵל אֶחָד – הָא נְמִי פְּשִׁטָּא, דְּהוּהָ לִיָּה קְבוּעָה, וְכֹל קְבוּעָה בְּמַחְצָה עַל מַחְצָה דְּמִי!

Similarly, if one sees that a door is locked before a child and the child is scared and crying, he breaks the door and takes the child out. And one who is vigilant and acts quickly is praiseworthy, and one need not seek permission from a court, although he intends to break it into boards to be used later. Similarly, one may extinguish a fire by placing a barrier^d of metal or clay vessels filled with water in front of it on Shabbat when life is endangered. And one who is vigilant and acts quickly is praiseworthy, and one need not seek permission from a court, although he leaves the coals,ⁿ which can be used for cooking after Shabbat.

The Gemara comments: And it is necessary to teach these examples, since each one suggests an original idea. As, had it taught us the halakha of the child who fell into the sea, we would have said: He must act quickly in that case because in the meantime, if he delays, the child will be swept away by the waves and disappear, and therefore the rescuer need not seek permission; but in the case of a child who fell into a pit, who remains there and is in no further danger, one might say the rescuer need not hurry but should request permission from the court first. Therefore, the baraita explains: No, it is necessary to tell us that case, too.

And if it had taught us the case of the pit, one might have thought it is because the child is scared at being trapped; but when a door is locked before a child, it is possible to sit on the other side of the door and amuse him with the sound of nuts until Shabbat is over. Therefore, it is necessary to teach that in this case, too, one does not delay but acts immediately because a life is possibly in danger.

It was taught in a baraita that one may extinguish a fire by placing a barrier in front of it on Shabbat. The Gemara asks: Why do I need this? What new point is taught by this additional case of a life-endangering situation? The Gemara answers: This halakha applies even if the fire is spreading toward another courtyard. Not only may this be done to save the lives of people in the courtyard on fire; it may also be done to prevent the fire from spreading to an adjacent courtyard.

§ Rav Yosef said that Rav Yehuda said that Shmuel said: With regard to saving a life, the Sages did not follow the majority^h as they do in other areas of halakha. The Gemara asks: What are the circumstances? When does one not follow the majority? If we say that one does not follow the majority in a case where there are nine Jews and one gentile among them and a building collapses on one of them, then in that case the majority of people are Jews and yet one desecrates Shabbat to save the trapped person. In such a case one is in fact following the majority. Alternatively, if the group is half Jews and half gentiles, the ruling is lenient with regard to a case of uncertainty concerning a life-threatening situation. But this, too, is not a case where one follows the minority, as there is an even chance that the victim is a Jew.ⁿ

Rather, it is referring to a case where there are nine gentiles and one Jew. However, this too is obvious. One saves the trapped individual because the group is in a fixed location, and there is a principle that whenever a group is in a fixed location it is considered as though it were evenly divided. In this case, despite the fact that the group's majority is gentile, it is considered as though it were composed half of Jews and half of gentiles.ⁿ

One may extinguish a fire by placing a barrier – מְכַבִּין – וּמְפָסְקִין בְּדִלְיקָה: If a fire breaks out in a courtyard and one fears it will cross to another courtyard, endangering the people there, it may be extinguished to prevent it from spreading (Shulhan Arukh, Orach Hayyim 329:1). Nowadays, the custom is to extinguish any life-threatening fire, even in the house of a gentile (Rema), since in any city there are certainly elderly people and children who are unable to escape (Mishna Berura; Shulhan Arukh, Orach Hayyim 334:26).

With regard to saving a life the Sages did not follow the majority – לֹא הֵלְכוּ בְּפִקּוּחַ נַפְשׁ אַחֵר הָרוֹב – With regard to saving a life, the principle of majority does not apply. If there are nine gentiles and one Jew in a courtyard and one individual leaves for another courtyard where a building falls on him, such that from a normal halakhic perspective he would be considered to be one of the majority, in a case of uncertainty concerning a life-threatening situation he is considered to be part of the fixed group and there is considered to be a fifty-fifty chance that he is Jewish. Therefore, one acts in order to save him. However, if all the members of a courtyard leave their fixed place, whereupon a building collapses on one of them, the principle of majority does apply. If the majority were gentiles, one does not rescue the person trapped under the building. This is how the Rambam, Rif, and Rosh interpret this passage (Shulhan Arukh, Orach Hayyim 329:2).

NOTES

He leaves the coals – מְכֻבֵּי מְכֻבֵּי: The Rambam translates these unusual Aramaic words to mean that he clears a path at the same time as he is occupied with extinguishing the fire.

Jews and gentiles with regard to saving a life – יִשְׂרָאֵל וְגוֹיִם – בְּהַצֵּלָה: The reason that the Gemara permits violating Shabbat only to save Jewish lives is explained later. According to the Meiri, anything stated about gentiles in this text is referring strictly to idolaters. Gentiles who believe in the unity of God are treated like Jews with respect to this issue.

Majority and fixed location – רוֹב וְקְבוּעָה: When various items are mixed together, one follows the majority, as it is likely that a random sample will come from the largest group. However, when objects are permanently fixed, the sample is distorted and one can no longer rely on statistics. In such a case, any individual is considered to have an even chance of belonging to either group.

NOTES

Most of the them left or some of them left – פָּרְשׁוּ וּבָקִים – נִמְקָצְתָם: The Rambam and other commentaries reason as follows: If all the individuals leave for another courtyard, they lose their status of being in a fixed location. Therefore, the principle of majority applies, and one does not desecrate Shabbat for any of them. But if only some people leave, the status of being in a fixed location still applies. Rashi takes the opposite approach. Rabbeinu Efrayim explains that if some of them leave, there are two uncertainties: Uncertainty as to whether the Jew remained in his original place or whether he left, and uncertainty as to whether the building fell on him or not. However, the Ra'avad and many others maintain that, with regard to saving a life, the ruling is lenient even when there are several uncertainties.

HALAKHA

Lineage of a child found in a city – יְחִידוֹ תֵּינוּק שֶׁנִּמְצָא בְּעִיר – If a baby is found in a city in which both Jews and gentiles live, its status is that of an uncertain gentile, regardless of which group is the majority. If such an individual later marries a Jewish woman, he must divorce her due to the chance that he is not Jewish. If he immerses for the sake of conversion, he is considered a Jew (Shulhan Arukh, Even HaEzer 4:33).

לֹא צְרִיכָא דְפְרוּשׁ לְחַצְרָא אַחֲרָתָא, מַהוּ דְתִימָא: כָּל דְּפָרִישׁ – מְרֻבָּא פְרִישׁ, קָא מְשַׁמַּע לֵן דְּלֵא הִלְכוּ בְּפִקּוּחַ נַפְשׁ אַחֵר הָרֹב.

אֵינִי? וְהָאֵמַר רַבִּי אֲסִי אָמַר רַבִּי יוֹחָנָן: תְּשׁוּעָה גּוֹיִם וְיִשְׂרָאֵל אֶחָד, בְּאוֹתָהּ חָצֵר – מִפְּקִיחוֹ, בְּחָצֵר אַחֲרָתָא – אֵין מִפְּקִיחוֹ! לֹא קְשִׁיָּא. הֵא – דְּפָרוּשׁ בּוֹלְהוּ, הֵא – דְּפָרוּשׁ מִקְצָתֶיהוּ.

וּמִי אָמַר שְׁמוּאֵל הֵכִיז וְהִתְנַן: מִצָּא בְּהַ תֵּינוּק מוֹשְׁלֵךְ, אִם רֹב גּוֹיִם – גּוֹי, וְאִם רֹב יִשְׂרָאֵל – יִשְׂרָאֵל, מִחֲצָה עַל מִחֲצָה – יִשְׂרָאֵל. וְאָמַר רַב: לֹא שָׁנוּ אֶלָּא לְהַחְיִיתוֹ, אֲבָל לְיַחְסוֹ – לֹא.

The Gemara answers: No, it is necessary to teach that one does not follow the majority in a case where one individual did not remain with the group in their courtyard but separated and went to another courtyard, and a building collapses on him. Least you say: One should follow the principle that whatever is separated from a group is considered to have left from the majority, and since there was a majority of gentiles there the individual who left the group was probably a gentile, and it is not necessary to clear the debris for a gentile on Shabbat, therefore it teaches us that with regard to uncertainty in a situation of saving a life, one does not follow the majority.

The Gemara asks: Is that so? But didn't Rav Asi say that Rabbi Yohanan said: If there are nine gentiles and one Jew and a building collapses on one of them, if it is in that same courtyard one removes the debris, but in another courtyard one does not remove the debris? The Gemara answers: This is not difficult; there is no contradiction between the halakhot. This case, where one removes the debris, is when they all left for another courtyard and it is clear that the Jew was among them. Consequently, the principle of being in a fixed location still applies, and it is considered a case of uncertainty. That other situation is when only a minority of them left for the other courtyard, and it is unknown whether the Jew left with them.^N

The Gemara asks: Did Shmuel actually say this, that one does not follow the majority with regard to saving a life? Didn't we learn in a mishna: If one finds an abandoned child in a city and his parents are unknown, if the majority of the city are gentiles the child is considered a gentile; and if the majority of the city are Jews the child is considered a Jew; if the city is composed of half gentiles and half Jews, the child is considered a Jew? And Rav said: They taught this, that he is a Jew, only with respect to sustaining him but not with respect to attributing a lineage to him. One does not say that he is definitely Jewish based on the majority. Therefore, with regard to the halakhot of marriage, his status remains uncertain. If the abandoned child is a girl, she is not permitted to marry a priest, who may marry only a woman of certain lineage.^H

Perek VIII
Daf 85 Amud a

וּשְׁמוּאֵל אָמַר: לְפָקֵחַ עָלָיו אֶת הַגֵּל בִּי אֵיתְמַר דְּשְׁמוּאֵל – אֲרִישָׁא אֵיתְמַר: אִם רֹב גּוֹיִם – גּוֹי, אָמַר שְׁמוּאֵל: וְלֵעֲנַן פְּקוּחַ נַפְשׁ אֵינוּ בֵּן.

אִם רֹב גּוֹיִם גּוֹי לְמַאי הֵילְכְתָא? אָמַר רַב פָּפָא: לְהַאכִּילוֹ נְבִילוֹת. אִם רֹב יִשְׂרָאֵל – יִשְׂרָאֵל, לְמַאי הֵילְכְתָא – לְהַחְיִיר לוֹ אֲבִידוֹתוֹ.

And Shmuel said: This halakha of the status of a found child is with regard to removing debris from on top of him, implying that if there is a majority of gentiles in the city where he is found, one does not violate Shabbat by removing the debris from the child to save his life. This implies that one does follow the majority in the case of saving a life. The Gemara answers: When this statement of Shmuel was stated, it was stated with regard to the first halakha. Shmuel's intent was to be lenient, and his statement should be understood as follows: If the majority are gentiles, he is a gentile. Shmuel said: But with regard to the matter of saving a life it is not so. Rather, one saves him based on the uncertainty.

S It was taught that if there is a majority of gentiles in the city, a foundling is considered to have the status of a gentile. The Gemara asks: To what halakha does this statement relate? Rav Pappa said: It relates to feeding him non-kosher food. One need not protect the child from every prohibition and may even feed him non-kosher food, as though he were a gentile. It was further taught: If there is a majority of Jews, he is a Jew. The Gemara asks: To what halakha does this relate? The Gemara answers: It relates to returning a lost object to him. In such a case it is assumed that he is definitely a Jew. Consequently, Jews must return lost objects to him, whereas there is no obligation to return lost objects to gentiles.

הילכתא? אמר ריש לקיש: לנזקין,
היכי דמי? אי נמא דנגחיה תורא דידן
לתורא דידיה – נייתי ראיה ונשקול!

It was further stated: If the city is half gentile and half Jewish, the foundling has the status of a Jew. The Gemara asks: To what halakha does this relate? Reish Lakish said: It is referring to halakhot of damages.^N The Gemara asks: What are the circumstances? If we say that our ox, i.e., an ox belonging to another Jew, gored his ox, one could ask: How can he make a claim like a Jew? Let him bring proof that he is Jewish, and only then may he take the money for damages, since the burden of proof rests upon the claimant. Since he cannot prove his Jewish status, he has no claim.^N

לא צריכא, דנגחיה תורא דידיה
לתורא דידן, פלגא – יהיב ליה, אידיך
פלגא – נמא ליה: אייתי ראיה דלאו
ישראל אנא, ושקול.

The Gemara answers: No, it is necessary when his innocuous ox, which has gored fewer than three times, gored our ox, i.e., an ox belonging to a Jew, in which case he gives him half, which is what a Jew pays for damages caused by an innocuous ox. However, a gentile must make full restitution for the damage caused. The foundling^H does not pay the other half, which a gentile gives to a Jew if his ox harms a Jew's ox. Let us say to the one who suffered the damage: Bring proof^N that I am not a Jew and take the money. In that case, the burden of proof rests upon the one who suffered the damage.

”מי שנפל עליו מפולת וכו’.” מאי

§ It was taught in the mishna: With regard to one upon whom a rockslide fell, and there is uncertainty whether he is there under the debris or whether he is not there; and there is uncertainty whether he is still alive or whether he is dead; and there is uncertainty whether the person under the debris is a gentile or whether he is Jew, one clears the pile from atop him. The Gemara asks: What is the mishna saying? Why does it bring three different uncertainties to illustrate the principle that one violates Shabbat to save a life even in a case of uncertainty?

לא מיבעיא קאמר: לא מיבעיא ספק
הוא שם ספק אינו שם, דאי איתיה חי
הוא – דמפקחין, אלא אפילו ספק חי
ספק מת – מפקחין, ולא מיבעיא ספק
חי ספק מת דישראל, אלא אפילו
ספק גוי ספק ישראל – מפקחין.

The Gemara explains: It is speaking using the style of: Needless to say, and the mishna should be understood as follows: Needless to say, in a case where it is uncertain whether he is there or not there, one removes the debris, since if he is there and he is alive, one must clear the debris. But even if it is uncertain whether he is alive or dead, one must clear the debris. And needless to say, when there is uncertainty whether he is alive or dead, but it is certain that he is a Jew, one must clear the debris. Rather, one must clear the debris even if there is uncertainty whether he is a gentile or a Jew.

”מצאוהו חי מפקחין.” מצאוהו חי
פשיטא! לא צריכא, דאפילו לחיי
שעה.

§ The mishna taught: If they found him alive, they continue to remove the debris. The Gemara is surprised at this: If they find him alive, it is obvious that they remove the debris, since that is saving a life. The Gemara answers: No, it is necessary to teach that one must desecrate Shabbat for his sake even if it is clear that he will live only a short while^{NH} and will die soon after.

To halakhot of damages – לנזקין: Tosafot ask why the Gemara does not explain all the distinctions with regard to the status of this foundling in terms of damages. The later commentaries argue that, according to the opinion that one does not follow the majority in monetary matters, such distinctions are out of place (Shem Yosef).

Returning lost objects and paying damages to a gentile – הלשבת אבדה וניזקין לגוי: The halakhot of returning lost objects and paying only half damages caused by an innocuous ox are not universal halakhot; rather, they are unique laws given to the Jewish people. This is why they do not apply when gentiles are involved.

Bring proof – אייתי ראיה: Some commentaries add that even when there is a legitimate reason to think that the foundling is not a Jew, such as when he clearly does not behave like a Jew, one still acts based on the majority of Jews (Tosafot HaRosh).

A short while – לחיי שעה: The Me'iri adds that in the short time remaining to him, he may confess his sins, repent, and prepare himself for death. One must not deprive him of this opportunity.

HALAKHA

A child found in a city – תינוק שנמצא בעיר – If a child was found in a city of Jews and gentiles and was not converted, nor did he convert on his own, then he may be fed non-kosher food if the majority of residents of the town are not Jewish. If the majority of residents in the town are Jewish, he is treated as a Jew and his lost objects must be returned. If the population of the town is evenly split, he must be sustained as a Jew and rescued from a collapsed building on Shabbat. With regard to paying damages, his status is in doubt, and the burden of proof rests on the claimant (Rambam Sefer Kedusha, Hilkhot Issurei Bia 15:22). Other authorities claim that if the majority in the town is gentile, the child is rescued from a ruin on Shabbat, but he need not be sustained (Tur, Shulhan Arukh, Even HaEzer 4:34).

Even if he will live only a short while – אפילו לחיי שעה: If a person is found crushed under debris and will survive only a short while, one still clears the debris from him on Shabbat (Shulhan Arukh, Orach Hayyim 329:4).

One may save a corpse from a fire on Shabbat – מצילין את – המת מהדליקה בשבת: If there is concern that a dead body will be consumed by fire on Shabbat, a loaf of bread or a child is placed on it, whereupon it may be removed from danger. If such a procedure is not possible, the body may be moved normally, but not to a different domain. This ruling is in accordance with the opinion of Rabbi Yehuda ben Lakish (Shulhan Arukh, Orah Hayyim 311:1).

Check until the nose – בודק עד חוטמו: If a person is found in debris on Shabbat, his breathing is checked by examining his nose. If he is still breathing, the rescue is continued. In that case, it does not matter whether the digging began at his head or his feet. This ruling is in accordance with the unattributed baraita (Shulhan Arukh, Orah Hayyim 329:4).

“ואם מת ייחווהו”. הא נמי פשיטא! לא צריכא לרבי יהודה בן לקיש. דתנא: אין מצילין את המת מפני הדליקה. אמר רבי יהודה בן לקיש: שמעתי שמצילין את המת מפני הדליקה. ואפילו רבי יהודה בן לקיש לא קאמר אלא מתוך שאדם בהול על מתו, אי לא שרית ליה – אתי לכבוויי. אבל הכא, אי לא שרית ליה – מאי אית ליה למעבד?

§ The mishna taught: If they found him dead, they should leave him. The Gemara is surprised at this: Isn't this also obvious? What allowance might there be to desecrate Shabbat for the sake of a corpse? The Gemara answers: No, this ruling is necessary according to the opinion of Rabbi Yehuda ben Lakish, as it was taught in a baraita: One may not save a corpse from a fire, since one may not violate Shabbat for the sake of the dead. Rabbi Yehuda ben Lakish said: I heard that one may save a corpse from a fire.⁴ The Gemara challenges: Even Rabbi Yehuda ben Lakish said this only with regard to a fire because a person is agitated over his dead relative, whose body might burn in the fire. If you do not permit him to remove the corpse he may come to extinguish the fire and transgress a severe Torah prohibition. However, here, in the case of a rockslide or building collapse, if you do not permit him to remove the debris, what might he do? In this case, there is no concern of Shabbat desecration, and preserving the dignity of the dead does not override Shabbat.

The Rabbis taught: If a person is buried under a collapsed building, until what point does one check to clarify whether the victim is still alive? Until what point is he allowed to continue clearing the debris? They said: One clears until the victim's nose.⁴ If there is no sign of life, i.e., if he is not breathing, he is certainly dead. And some say: One clears until the victim's heart to check for a heartbeat. If several people are buried and one checked and found the upper ones under the debris dead, he should not say: The lower ones are likely also already dead, and there is no point in continuing to search. There was an incident where they found the upper ones dead and the lower ones alive.

The Gemara comments: Let us say that the dispute between these tanna'im who disagree about checking for signs of life is like the dispute between these tanna'im who disagree about the formation of the fetus. As it was taught in a baraita: From what point is the fetus created? It is from its head, as it is stated: “You are He Who took me [gozi] out of my mother's womb” (Psalms 71:6), and it says: “Cut off [gozi] your hair, and cast it away” (Jeremiah 7:29). These verses suggest that one is created from the head, the place of the hair. Abba Shaul says: A person is created from his navel, and he sends his roots in every direction until he attains the image of a person. The tanna who says that the presence of life is determined based on the nose holds in accordance with the opinion of the tanna who maintains that the formation of a fetus begins with its head. Likewise, the tanna who says the presence of life is determined based on the heart holds in accordance with the opinion of the one who thinks the formation of a fetus begins with its navel.

The Gemara rejects this: Even if you say that the formation of a fetus from the navel is the opinion of Abba Shaul, he may nevertheless require one to check the nose for signs of life. Until now, Abba Shaul spoke there only about formation, saying that everything is created from its middle; however, as for saving a life, even Abba Shaul admits that the main sign of life is in the nose, as it is written: “All in whose nostrils was the breath of the spirit of life” (Genesis 7:22).

Rav Pappa said: The dispute with regard to how far to check for signs of life applies when the digger begins removing the rubble from below, starting with the feet, to above. In such a case it is insufficient to check until his heart; rather, one must continue removing rubble until he is able to check his nose for breath. But if one cleared the rubble from above to below, once he checked as far as the victim's nose he is not required to check further, as it is written: “All in whose nostrils was the breath of the spirit of life” (Genesis 7:22).
