This Week's Parashah

On his way to Haran, Jacob dreams of angels ascending and descending a ladder. God appears to Jacob and repeats the blessing given to Abraham and Isaac, and promises to protect him and return him to Canaan. Jacob vows to accept God if the promise is fulfilled. When Jacob arrives in Haran, his uncle Laban takes him in. Laban has two daughters, Leah and Rachel. Jacob agrees to work for Laban seven years and then take Rachel as a wife. Laban deceives Jacob on the wedding night and substitutes Leah for Rachel. To appease Jacob's anger over the deception, Laban agrees that Rachel, too, can be Jacob's wife in exchange for an additional seven years of labor. Leah bears Jacob four sons. Rachel is barren, so she gives Jacob her maid Bilhah as a concubine. Bilhah bears two sons. Leah, in turn, gives Jacob Zilpah, her maid, as a concubine. Leah then has three more children. Finally, Rachel conceives and bears Joseph. Jacob wishes to return to Canaan, but Laban is reluctant to let him go. They agree that as his wages for 20 years of service, Jacob can take some of Laban's flock. Then, without alerting Laban, Jacob and his family flee Haran. As they leave, Rachel steals her father's idols. Laban pursues Jacob, but God warns him not to take revenge.

Today's Haftarah

The people of Israel were worshiping idols and were being influenced by other countries and people. Assyria was becoming very powerful and posed a threat. The prophet Hosea told the people about their ancestor, Jacob. Although Jacob led a hard life, he loved God and looked to God to guide him. Hosea explained that the people need God's guidance to survive, as we have needed it throughout history. Even when Israel errs, God retains love for the people. The spirit of teshuvah (repentance) is found throughout the selection. "Jacob fled into the field of Aram, and Israel searched for a wife." This opening verse of the Haftarah brings us back to the beginnings of the people Israel, Jacob's people. This week's Torah portion revolves around Jacob's story: his flight from home and the beginnings of not only the next generation, but foundation of what will be B'nei Yisrael, literally, Jacob's (whose name is later changed to Israel) children.
