This Week’s Parashah

Moses explains the everlasting covenant between the Israelites and God. The covenant fulfills the promise made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. However, the covenant will last only if they follow the Torah. If they do not, then grave punishments will occur. Moses promises that even if they forsake the Torah’s teachings, God will forgive the Israelites if they return to God’s ways, and repentant for their sins. Moses says that God is setting the choice of life and death before them. They are told: “Choose life.” Moses calls upon Joshua to succeed him as leader. He then transmits the Torah to the Kohanim (Priests), instructing the people to gather every seven years at the festival of Sukkot to hear the reading of the Torah.

The timing of this week’s Sedra, just before the High Holy Days, is keenly highlighted with a strong theme of “teshuvah” (repentance). The first 10 lines of Deut. 30 contain the word “shuv” (turn, closely related to the word for repentance, or return) seven times. If Israel “turns back” to the God it has forsaken, says the text, God will graciously receive it back in turn.

Today’s Haftarah

This Haftarah is always read just before Rosh Hashanah. Isaiah explains that God places Zion’s importance before all. “But neither does God rest until Jerusalem is restored, until God makes Jerusalem the praise of all the earth.” The text portrays God as a warrior who has won a battle against an enemy of Israel. Isaiah praises God for always coming to the defense of the Children of Israel, showing them God’s protecting care. “They alone are my people,” says God, “so I became their savior.” God’s deeds of mercy, goodness and love are a sign of the covenant maintained with the Jewish people.
